Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for your letter of 11 November 2013 highlighting your concerns about the impact of Waratah Coal's Galilee coal project, also known as China First, on the Bimblebox Nature Refuge (BNR). I have been requested to respond to you on the Premier's behalf.

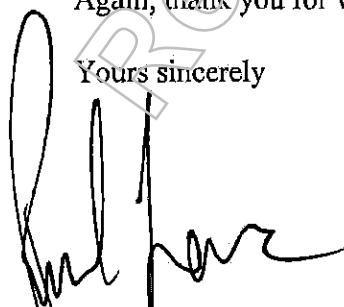

I can tell you that the coexistence of mining activities and other industries, the community and the environment is a key issue of concern for the State Government. The Environmental Protection Act 1994 requires that significant conservation values, notably those associated with existing nature refuges, are addressed on a case-by-case basis in relation to any project.

The environmental assessment of the Galilee coal project (Northern Export Facility) was undertaken in accordance with the State Development and Public Works Organisation Act 1971. The Coordinator-General's evaluation report on the environmental impact statement (EIS) was completed in August 2013. The Coordinator-General, Mr Barry Broe was satisfied that sufficient information had been provided to enable a proper evaluation of the potential impacts of the project. He found that the project can proceed, subject to the conditions and recommendations contained in his report.

The Coordinator-General recognised the loss of the BNR and imposed a condition on Waratah requiring, as a minimum, that the company find an offset area of at least the size of BNR, and of equivalent or higher ecological value. To their credit, Waratah has actually committed to find an offset area twice the size of the BNR. The Coordinator-General will make a final decision on Waratah's offset requirements following the Australian Government's decision on the Galilee Coal project and its assessment of Commonwealth offset requirements. Before the project can proceed, the EIS assessment being undertaken by the Commonwealth must be completed and approval given under the Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999.

Again, thank you for writing to the Premier and I hope this information is of assistance.

Yours sincerely

Interview with Greg Hunt, Federal Minister for the Environment about the approval of the Abbot Point coal terminal expansion and dredging operation in the Great Barrier Reef Marine Park. Hunt says the dredging operation will be dumped in the sea rather than taken as land fill because it is a mixture of sand and mud that if, put on shore on the open air, would become acid sulphate. Hunt says there is already a major terminal there, and they have consolidated the footprints, taking it down from a 38 million cubic metre proposal under the ALP to a three million cubic metre proposal. Hunt says in the case of the Gladstone Harbour project, it was possible to use the dredge spoil did not have an acid sulphate issue, and could be used for land reclamation. Hunt says yesterday he met with Campbell Newman, Queensland Premier and talked about wanting to use wherever possible except where there is an acid sulphate issue for land reclamation rather than relocation within the coastal area.

He says the Commonwealth should give states and local government power over local issues in areas such as education and health. He says that infrastructure investment is very important nationally. He says that with the approval of the Galilee coal project by the Abbot government we will see $60b of investment. Newman says he is sympathetic to those affected by job losses in the car industry and the Federal Government and states will work towards retraining, but he doesn't believe we can prop up an uncompetitive industry. $2b line moves closer INDIAN firm Adani is a step closer to building a $2.2 billion rail line connecting a proposed coal mine at Queensland's Galilee Basin to the controversial Abbot Point coal port.

Deputy Premier Jeff Sceney said yesterday the Queensland Government has approved the release of an environmental impact statement for public consultation for the North Galilee Basin Rail project.

He said the state has made it clear it wants to develop the Galilee Basin's coal reserves, but in an environmentally responsible manner and in consultation with the public.

The 300km line would connect Adani's planned Carmichael Coal Mine to the Abbot Point coal port near Bowen.

Up to 100 million tonnes of coal would be transported each year.

Have your say on impact of new resort

THE public has been invited to have its say on the state's environmental assessment of the proposed new Capricorn Integrated Resort near Yeppoon.

Deputy Premier Jeff Seeney said the Coordinator General Barry Broe had declared the $600 million project to be a "co-ordinated project" requiring an environmental impact statement.

"The Coordinator General has advised that, given the scope and potential impacts of the project, that he will co-ordinate a whole-of-government response to its assessment," Mr Seeney said. He would release the draft terms of reference for an EIS and seek submissions from today until January 27.

"The proponent, Iwasaki Sangyo Co, aims to construct a new 300-room, 5-star resort with fine dining and recreational facilities near its existing Mercure Capricorn Resort," Mr Seeney said.

The resort site will be located on 9000ha of land.

The draft terms of reference for the EIS are available from: www.dsdp.qld.gov.au/capricornresort.

$2.2b rail line from Galilee Basin to Abbot Point a step closer

Indian company Adani is a step closer to building a $2.2 billion rail line connecting a proposed coalmine at Queensland's Galilee Basin to the controversial Abbot Point coal port.

Deputy Premier Jeff Seeney said on Saturday the government has approved the release of an environmental impact statement for public consultation for the North Galilee Basin Rail project.

Mr Seeney said the state had made it clear it wanted to develop the Galilee Basin's coal reserves, but in an environmentally responsible manner and in consultation with the public.

Co-ordinator-General Barry Broe said the EIS process determined and addressed the project's potential environmental, social and economic impacts.

The 300-kilometre rail line would connect Adani's planned Carmichael coalmine to the controversial Abbot Point coal port near Bowen.

Up to 100 million tonnes of coal would be transported on the rail line each year if the project was approved.

It would create up to 1700 jobs during construction and 370 jobs once it was up and running.

Federal Environment Minister Greg Hunt's office was carrying out a separate assessment as the impact of the project might be of national environmental significance.

Mr Hunt last week approved a major coal port expansion and dredging at Abbot Point, subject to environmental conditions.

The project involved dumping 3 million cubic metres of dredge spoil offshore in the Great Barrier Marine Park, 24 kilometres north-east of Abbot Point.

Greens senator Larissa Waters said the Abbot Point approval was an environmentally disastrous decision that threatened the reef, the world's climate and Queensland's economic stability as climate change impacts.

Mr Seeney said activists would say anything to shut down the coal industry and that the public should not be fooled by their "alarmist" response to the Abbot Point dredging project.

He said they had ignored the fact most dredging material was clean sand that could be easily settled and the dumping would occur well away from any coral reefs. Public submissions on the rail project must be made to the Co-ordinator-General's office by February 11.

Rail proposal

QUEENSLAND'S Coordinator General has approved the release of an Environmental Impact Statement for the $2.2 billion North Galilee Basin Rail project and is now inviting public feedback.

Deputy Premier and Minister for State Development, Infrastructure and Planning Jeff Seeney said Adani Mining is proposing to construct a 300 kilometre rail line that will connect the proposed Carmichael Coal Mine and Rail project to the Abbot Point coal port.

If approved, the rail project would have the capacity to carry for 100 million tonnes of coal per year, would create 1700 jobs during construction and 370 jobs once operational.
