Good morning all

The department has asked me to follow up with you in relation to the attached PBN.

It is now urgent as QPS are about to sign an agreement with the Commonwealth and they need the letter from the Premier to the Police Minister.

Any advice or assistance you can provide in progressing this matter would be much appreciated.

Kind regards

- Ladies and gentlemen

Good morning. I am here representing the Premier and Minister for the Arts the Hon Anastacia Palaszczuk, who regrets she is not able to join us.

I am delighted to be here as we open Rescue, an exhibition which gives a real-life glimpse into the technology, the daring, and the technique behind modern day rescues.

Featuring dramatic scenarios and hands-on exhibits, visitors can test their skills, reactions and courage in the face of simulated emergencies.

We are very lucky that these emergency scenarios take place in an educational environment, and that visitors can have a safe experience.

As we all know, this is not often the case with real life emergencies and I would like to acknowledge the qualified emergency professionals on hand today for the demonstration.

I pay tribute to their skills and their enormous dedication in real life emergencies that happen every day.

This government is committed to keeping Queenslanders safe, and last week's budget included $2 billion funding in public safety for additional police, police vehicles and new equipment for fire and emergency services.

Our police, fire and emergency volunteers do an amazing job and the Queensland Government supports them in their work.

With this exhibition, the Museum continues to be at the forefront of engaging Queenslanders in new and innovative ways.

The Queensland Government plays an essential role in supporting the Queensland Museum, and making these experiences accessible to Queensland, as well as assisting regional museums across the state.

Last week's budget also included $2m over four years for the Queensland Museum's state-wide resource centre network which assists local regional museums, many of which are run by local volunteers.

On the horizon for the Queensland Museum is the World Science Festival, taking place in March next year, making Brisbane the only city in the world outside of New York to present this prestigious science event.

We will also see the acclaimed international exhibition Collider: step inside the world's greatest experiment from the Science Museum, London, in 2017, which showcases the world's largest and most powerful particle accelerator.

It's clear that Queensland Museum is the place to be to understand more about our world.

On behalf of the Premier of Queensland, I thank the Queensland Museum for presenting Rescue, giving visitors a chance to test their own skills and learn more about how to deal with extreme conditions.

Thank you.

Subject: FireLine - Queensland Members of Parliament must choose

Firefighters - Queensland Members of Parliament must choose:

You can't be a little bit pregnant, you either are or you're not.

The same applies with the upcoming vote in Parliament; MP's either support the volunteer firefighters or they don't.

On Wednesday 3rd June 2015, Mr Jarrod Bleijie Shadow Minister for Police, Fire, Emergency Services and Corrective Services presented to Parliament a Private Members Bill to amend the Workers' Compensation and Rehabilitation Act 2003.

This landmark draft legislation will provide the highest level of support for all firefighters in any Australian State or Territory, and will cover all firefighters and Fire Wardens with no discriminatory prerequisites. This means that full time, part time and volunteer firefighters will be fairly covered should they contract cancer while defending their communities.

In a meeting on Wednesday 8th July 2015 with Queensland Treasury, the Palaszczuk Labor government presented their draft Bill to go before Parliament and this contains the section where full time firefighters are covered from their 1st fire, part time firefighters are covered from the 1st fire and volunteer firefighters will need to attend a minimum of 150 fires before they receive cancer coverage. The RFBAQ were not allowed to take a copy of the draft Bill from the room, has not had the ability to receive advice on the draft Bill and has not had the opportunity to consult the volunteer Board that directs RFBAQ policy. The RFBAQ clearly stated to Treasury that this single short meeting is not considered consultation.

The RFBAQ on the 12th June supplied a large background information piece to volunteers and brigades and now calls on all Rural Fire Brigades, volunteer firefighters, Fire Wardens and concerned members of the public ensure that your voice is heard in stopping this discrimination.

On Wednesday 15th July the Palaszczuk Labor government presented to Parliament a Bill that sees volunteer firefighter needing to attend 150 fires before they can access Presumptive Legislation.

Every MP must now choose to support a Bill that supports all firefighters or vote for a Bill that discriminates against the 1,441 Rural Fire Brigades and the 36,000 volunteer firefighters that defend 93% of Queensland.

Parliamentary Committee MP's will be taking submissions on firefighter cancer coverage are also Members of Parliament whose electorates and communities are defended by volunteer firefighters.

Head of the Parliamentary Committee that can support volunteer firefighters is Mr Mark Furner MP, Member for Ferny Grove - ALP (click here to view Ferny Grove map).

The Ferny Grove electorate is 244 sq klm, Rural Fire Brigades cover 193 sq klm = 80%

- 5 brigades
- 284 volunteers
- 6 stations (1 brigade has 2 stations)
- 15 yellow rural fire trucks
- 1 support vehicle
- 2 slip on firefighting units
- 2 trailer firefighting units
- 22 Fire Warden Districts

There are no Urban Fire and Rescue Stations within the Ferny Grove electorate.

A Labor Member of the Parliamentary Committee that can support volunteer firefighters is Jim Madden MP, Member for Ipswich West - ALP (click here to view Ipswich West map).

- Rural Fire Brigades covers approx. 75% of the Ipswich West electorate.
- 8 Rural Fire Brigades
- 7 Rural Fire Brigade Stations, 1 currently being built
- 384 Volunteers
- 23 yellow rural fire trucks
- 2 Support vehicles

A Labor Member of the Parliamentary Committee that can support volunteer firefighters is Mark Ryan, MP, Member for Morayfield - ALP (click here to view Morayfield map).

The Morayfield Electorate is 127 sq klm, Rural Fire Brigades cover 70.57 sq klm = 56%

- 3 Rural Fire Brigades
- 186 volunteers
- 9 yellow rural fire trucks
- 1 support vehicle.
- 1 fire warden

There are 2 urban stations within boundary (Caboolture and Burpengary).

It would be difficult to see how these MP's could vote against supporting the majority of firefighters in their own electorates.

The Honourable Jo-Ann Miller MP is the Minister responsible for Fire and Emergency Services and therefore the Minister responsible for supporting volunteer firefighters can be contacted on:

Release

The RFBAQ encourages all who wish to ensure that this discrimination does not go ahead to contact your local MP and /or use the A3 "pledge to support" poster.

If you have a photo with your MP and the "pledge to support" poster, please email a copy to the RFBAQ so the pledge can be acknowledged and widely distributed.

How you can make your volunteering voice heard

Write a letter to your local MP

- Identify yourself as a voter in their electorate. Find your local MP and CC your local (insert new external contact list) as they will be working together with other brigades in your district on behalf of RFB volunteers
- Make letter as personal as possible so that it is clear that your letter is not a generic template, insert an previous support you have given or received from your MP
- Use handwriting if it is legible and neat, do not write in UPPER CASE
- Keep it to one page
- Identify why you are writing
- Support your position with three key points, try not to ramble (keep on topic)
- Don't criticize your MP, if you want something from them be polite and rational
- Sign the letter and add your full name and address, this will allow the MP to send you an acknowledgement as well as confirming that you are a voter in their electorate

Letters to the editor (local or state newspaper)

- MPs' and their staff read their local papers and pay attention to the Editorial section and Letters to the Editor
- As above, keep your letter to one page @ 250 - 300 words
- As above, identify why you are writing
- As above, support position with three key points, try not to ramble
- As above, sign the letter and add your full name and address

Meet your MP

- The most effective way to make your point with your MP is in person
- Ring your local MP in their electorate office and ask for a meeting
- Do not ring when Parliament is sitting as your MP will be in Brisbane
- Identify why you want the meeting
- Do not go as a group
- Keep to the topic you want to talk about
- Support your position with three key points, try not to ramble (keep on topic)
- Provide local evidence of what needs to change
- Ask them for their support and what will happen next
- Thank your MP for the meeting

Ask your MP to attend your Brigade meeting

- Having your local MP attend a brigade meeting is an excellent way to physically demonstrate the capacity of your local RFB
- Ring your local MP in their electorate office and advise of the time and place of your next meeting
- Advise the MP's office of the topics that you wish to discuss

- Do not use this as an opportunity to demean or ambush your local MP with matters not agreed for discussion

Become their Facebook friend

- Facebook is a valuable tool as it is real time and other constituents can read the posts
- MP's monitor their Facebook account regularly and use it to judge community sentiment
- Keep your message short - people have a limited attention span on Facebook
- Do not write anything abusive or defamatory as your name will be next to your post
- Check all posts on a word document first - as spelling mistakes take away from your message
- Be aware that people will probably attach other matters to your post
- Do not get angry and type if someone disagrees with you - be calm and rational

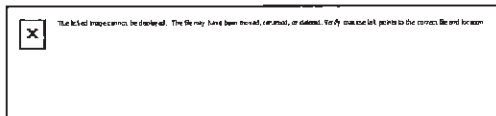

You will be the face of 36,000 volunteers, so you through your actions and what you say represent us all.

- Ladies and gentlemen

Good morning. I am here representing the Premier and Minister for the Arts the Hon Anastacia Palaszczuk, who regrets she is not able to join us.

I am delighted to be here as we open Rescue, an exhibition which gives a real-life glimpse into the technology, the daring, and the technique behind modern day rescues.

Featuring dramatic scenarios and hands-on exhibits, visitors can test their skills, reactions and courage in the face of simulated emergencies.

We are very lucky that these emergency scenarios take place in an educational environment, and that visitors can have a safe experience.

As we all know, this is not often the case with real life emergencies and I would like to acknowledge the qualified emergency professionals on hand today for the demonstration.

I pay tribute to their skills and their enormous dedication in real life emergencies that happen every day.

This government is committed to keeping Queenslanders safe, and last week's budget included $2 billion funding in public safety for additional police, police vehicles and new equipment for fire and emergency services.

Our police, fire and emergency volunteers do an amazing job and the Queensland Government supports them in their work.

With this exhibition, the Museum continues to be at the forefront of engaging Queenslanders in new and innovative ways.

The Queensland Government plays an essential role in supporting the Queensland Museum, and making these experiences accessible to Queensland, as well as assisting regional museums across the state.

Last week's budget also included $2m over four years for the Queensland Museum's state-wide resource centre network which assists local regional museums, many of which are run by local volunteers.

On the horizon for the Queensland Museum is the World Science Festival, taking place in March next year, making Brisbane the only city in the world outside of New York to present this prestigious science event.

We will also see the acclaimed international exhibition Collider: step inside the world's greatest experiment from the Science Museum, London, in 2017, which showcases the world's largest and most powerful particle accelerator.

It's clear that Queensland Museum is the place to be to understand more about our world.

On behalf of the Premier of Queensland, I thank the Queensland Museum for presenting Rescue, giving visitors a chance to test their own skills and learn more about how to deal with extreme conditions.

Thank you.

MEDIA ALERT

24 July 2015

Rescuers descend on Queensland Museum

Scaling rugged cliffs, plucking people from 10-metre seas, running into burning buildings – sounds like a Hollywood action movie, but it's all in a day's work for our rescue professionals.

A new exhibition opening at Queensland Museum's Sciencentre tomorrow, Saturday 25 July takes a journey into the perilous world of air, sea and land rescue, exploring the technology, daring and technique behind modern day rescues.

With dramatic emergency scenarios and hands-on exhibits, Rescue lets visitors test their reactions and courage in the face of emergency.

Queensland Museum CEO and Director Suzanne Miller said Rescue is a hands-on exhibition that will appeal to families.

"The exhibition demonstrates the challenges emergency personnel face in working in these extreme situations," Prof. Miller said.

"This exhibition will get people thinking about the high level of training and skill specialist rescue squads need to manage emergency operations."

"It's loads of fun with interactive action stations but it also teaches us about the important, often unrecognised, work our rescuers do on a daily basis," Prof. Miller said.

Rescue* is on at the Queensland Museum & Sciencentre from 25 July 2015 to 7 February 2016.

Admission is $14.50 Adults, $12.50 Concession and $11.50 for children (3-15). Entry is free for MyMuseum Members. For more information visit www.qm.qld.gov.au/rescue

Rescue has been developed by Scitech, Western Australia, in consultation with the Western Australia Fire and Emergency Services Department, Fire Services, State Emergency Service, Surf Life Saving and Sea Rescue organisations.

Exhibition Highlights

- Climb aboard a life-size helicopter for a simulated rescue flight
- Navigate through a smoke-filled burning building
- Tackle the climbing wall and learn all about vertical rescue
- Navigate an obstacle course on jet skis to save a swimmer
- Fight a fire
- Learn all about pulleys, ropes and knots
- Learn about rescue equipment such as the jaws of life, rescue uniforms, and rescue supply kits
- Become a journalist reporting from an emergency on the ground

Hi

I've just taken a call from Phil Wilmington from 9. He's interested in today's Sunday Mail story. He was initially confused about the police and TMR roles re cameras. I've given him the police media contact number for info on mobile speed camera sites and TMR's on all number for fixed camera sites. I've spoken to both departments' on call staff and they're willing to help out Phil with any available stats. He seems more interested in the mobile camera stats. He hasn't asked for a talking head at this stage, but if so, I'd suggest putting up an appropriate officer from QPS. Jo-Ann, Mark - are you ok with this tack? (I'll also give Prems on call media a heads up)

Regards

Wendy/Media team, if you're okay with these, I will distribute to EOs and make sure the Brisbane MPs double check with each other about which papers they're sending their versions to, although I'm fairly sure I've combined the MPs who have the same local quests to avoid double ups.

Any questions, please give me a bell.

Hi

I've just taken a call from Phil Wilmington from 9.

He's interested in today's Sunday Mail story.

He was initially confused about the police and TMR roles re cameras.

I've given him the police media contact number for info on mobile speed camera sites and TMR's on all number for fixed camera sites.

I've spoken to both departments' on call staff and they're willing to help out Phil with any available stats.

He seems more interested in the mobile camera stats.

He hasn't asked for a talking head at this stage, but if so, I'd suggest putting up an appropriate officer from QPS.

Jo-Ann, Mark - are you ok with this tack?

(I'll also give Prems on call media a heads up)

FYI as discussed with Kerryn briefly in the corridors of power... been having a to and fro all day with Jono Lea from ten wanting the Minister about an alleged pursuit on the northside this morning. He was quite aggressive and said he'd get their cameras to chase the Min 'down the halls with a camera' if she wasn't available for '2 minutes'

Advice from QPS is that it wasn't a pursuit, so definitely not going to give him a grab about pursuits. I said it was operational but he said he'd just say Min declined to comment and the Opposition would give him a grab. Said that our comment is that it's operational...

Spoke with COS & he asked for me to send through our response – see below

Cheers

Subject: Robbie Katter remarks Mt Isa PCC clarified

Categories: Blue Category

Member for Mount Isa, Rob Katter said he would prefer the Police Communications Centre in Mount Isa to stay in the face of QPS plans to shift it to Townsville, whilst acknowledging the efforts of Government to make up for the loss to Mount Isa.

"I do acknowledge the minister is intending on making six new police positions available to offset the loss of the communications jobs in Mount Isa and that means six new people coming into the community which is a bonus for our town," Mr Katter said.

As with the situation in Ipswich, Mr Katter said the Premier is asking for more consultation for the Mount Isa situation.

"The premier's office rang me this morning to say she wants more consultation and I'm happy with that," Mr Katter said.

"We've been told the Mount Isa Police Communications Centre cannot get staff and it needs an upgrade in terms of technology.

"My suggestion was to upgrade the technology, make a real effort to recruit staff locally and try and keep the Comms Centre here," Mr Katter said.

It was undeniable that there would be a decline in the service if it was transferred to Townsville.

"Without local knowledge, it's my opinion the service would decline for us in the North West."

Mr Katter said he and Mount Isa City Councillor Kim Coglean "put up a big fight" with the Newman Government to hold this off this for the past 12 months and it was his preference still for the Comms Centre to remain in Mount Isa.

Townsville Correctional Centre disturbance

I have been advised that between five to ten prisoners were involved in a disturbance in the Townsville Correctional Centre on Saturday afternoon.

Whilst the majority complied with directions to return to their cells, two prisoners continued to refuse.

The incident was resolved about 8.30 pm, however one prisoner and one QCS officer received cuts from broken glass and they were taken to Townsville Hospital for treatment.

The centre sustained some damage during the incident, including broken glass.

The incident has been referred to the QPS Corrective Services Investigation Unit (CSIU).

The safety of prison staff is the Government's top priority and that's why we have moved to address the chronic overcrowding of the state's jails caused by the LNP.

The Corrective Services Minister announced the recommissioning of the Borallon Correctional Centre last week a short term solution.

Morning, please find attached a HIB on the speed camera signage changes story in today's Sunday Mail.

FYI – in relation to the Peter Cameron article, the Minister has never backed home detention, the belt & 'hijacking' the road safety event were both CM-created stories, it was not her plan to close the Ipswich Comms Centre, has no knowledge of the anti-Mayor FB site and has never declared herself to be a terrorist target.

Speed camera signage changes

Instead of the small sign that used to be used to alert the public of a speed camera van in use, the QPS has enlarged the signage on the van itself.

This was to resolve complaints that the sign was either too small and too far away from the road to be useful, or was taking up too much space on the footpath or taking up car parking space.

This change has the support of our road safety partner stakeholders such as RACQ.

The QPS uses a mix of both overt and covert speed cameras to target dangerous driver behaviour.

The important message is that the police could be anywhere, anytime and if you don't speed, you won't get caught.

The Palaszczuk Government supports police 100 per cent in their effort to keep Queenslanders safe on the road and reduce the road toll.

Contact: (Minister Miller's Office)

Background:

QUEENSLAND police have been told to remove signs warning drivers of upcoming mobile speed camera traps.

"Speed camera in use" signs that were placed ahead of police camera vans were deemed "too problematic" and too small by the state's Road Policing Command.

It comes as almost 600,000 motorists on Queensland roads were fined more than $87 million in 2014 by the mobile cameras.

The new directive, which began on July 1, coincides with the minimum fine for speeding increasing to $157 for vehicles less than 13km/h over the limit.

"The signs were problematic and too small," Road Policing Command Inspector Allan Hales said.

"If you are in an urban area you either put them on the footpath and people whinge about that or you put them on a street and people whinge you are taking up another car space."

Release

"So what we actually did was increase the placarding on the side of vehicles ... and there are 'Join the Drive' logos on there and also 'Road Policing Command' in bigger letters."

Queensland has about 47 mobile camera vehicles, including 12 covert vehicles which have never used signage.

Insp Hales said he did not expect the changes to increase the number of fines "because the signs were so small and were out of place sometimes".

"The policy always was that they were past the camera," he said.

"It was mainly really about what was the best — the placard on the side of the van is larger, it's easy to see, and we thought that was better than having a small sign that people sometimes get distracted by."

Insp Hales said data showed a drop in the road network speeds of motorists in the past few years. Police are now focused on getting drivers in the lower bracket of speeding to slow down further.

"It might only be one or two kilometres an hour but the research shows that even those small changes are significant to the frequency and severity of crashes," Insp Hales said.

Police would be on highways and in school zones as children prepared to go back to classes next week.

RACQ executive manager of technical and safety policy Steve Spalding did not see the change as misleading.

"I think police have always used a mix of overt and covert, and we certainly support that," he said.

Mobile camera fines

2012: 359,764 fines over 67,170 hours — 5.36 per hour

2013: 436,080 fines over 92,303 — 4.72 per hour

2014: 597,959 fines over 97,080 hours — 6.16 per hour

Subject: 2 x QPS responses to 2 x media inquiries re police communications centres

Good afternoon,

We have received two media inquiries in relation to Police Communications Centres in Mount Isa and Innisfail being closed or moved.

Please find copies of the responses below, to be issued to both journalists shortly.

Comms closures inquiry

Inquiry from Isabel Roe, ABC:

Can I please confirm with you that the Innisfail and Mount Isa comms centres are being slated for closure/being moved elsewhere?

You'd be aware of the Together Union's claims.

They also say there's 'hints' of the same changes at Mackay, Gladstone, Maryborough and Gympie.

Does QPS have a response?

Response:

The Queensland Police Service is continually looking for ways of improving our services to the community. The current distribution of most Police Communication Centres around Queensland is based on technology, staffing levels, policing strategies and management frameworks that are more than two decades old.

Recent innovations through the advancement of a state wide digital network, a new computer aided dispatch system and changes to the operating environment for contemporary policing in this State has allowed the Queensland Police Service to further consider the most advantageous placement of its communication hubs.

Discussions and consultation have been held regarding the transition of the Police Communication Centre functions at Mt Isa to Townsville; and at Innisfail to Cairns. However, as a result of action by the Together Union further discussions will be undertaken in relation to these planned consolidations.

Whilst the consolidation of Police Communication Centres in Queensland is a program of work designed to leverage the benefits of current and future technology to enable the best possible policing service to the community, no decisions have been made regarding other Communication Centres at this time.

The Queensland Police Service will always work with its staff, relevant unions and the community to ensure the safety and security of all Queenslanders

Inquiry from Brad Thompson, The North West Star:

Is there any truth to speculation that the police communications room in Mount Isa will be relocated to Townsville?

Response:

Subject: Media releases: new police for Queensland
Attachments: s.73 Not Relevant

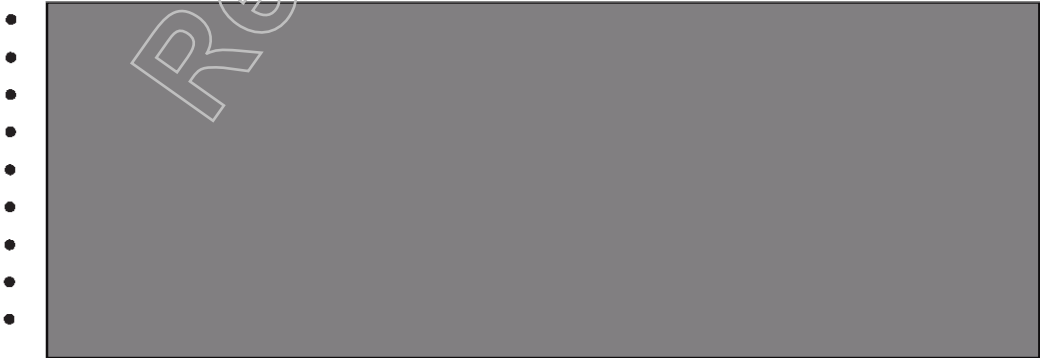

Importance: High

Good evening,

Please find attached the following media releases for Minister Miller to issue on Thursday ahead of the QPS induction ceremony for 87 new police that afternoon.

- Statewide
- Biloela
- Emerald
- Gympie
- Ipswich (includes Jim Madden and Jennifer Howard)
- Sunshine Coast
- Toowoomba and Lockyer Valley

Please also find attached localised media releases for MPs announcing the new police. They will be able to send this to their local papers tomorrow if they have a deadline of before Thursday.

s.73 Not Relevant

Wendy/Media team, if you're okay with these, I will distribute to EOs and make sure the Brisbane MPs double check with each other about which papers they're sending their versions to, although I'm fairly sure I've combined the MPs who have the same local quests to avoid double ups.

Any questions, please give me a bell.

Cheers

New police for the Sunshine Coast as part of Palaszczuk Govt commitment

Police Minister Jo-Ann Miller has announced five new police for the Sunshine Coast as part of the Palaszczuk Labor Government's commitment to an extra 266 new police statewide over the next year.

Minister Miller said the Coast's new recruits were among 87 First Year Constables sworn into the Queensland Police Service at a special ceremony in Brisbane today.

"Our Government is committed to keeping the people of the Sunshine Coast safe and that's why I'm pleased that just a week on from the Budget, we're already delivering on our commitment for extra police for this busy region," Minister Miller said.

"The Sunshine Coast is a jewel in the crown of our tourism industry and one of my priorities as Police Minister is to ensure locals and visitors alike always feel safe and secure while they're out and about enjoying the region's gorgeous beaches and the vibrant nightlife.

"From my visits to the Coast, I know that local business owners and police share a concern about alcohol-fuelled violence. These new officers will help to tackle this important issue head on.

"The Sunshine Coast will also benefit from the extra $20 million we have committed to the QPS over four years to address alcohol-fuelled violence, organised crime and the drug Ice."

Minister Miller said the Coast's five new officers would be posted to two of the region's busiest stations.

"Three officers will start out at Maroochydore station while the other two will be based at Caloundra," Minister Miller said.

"Over the next year these officers will take on a range of duties and learn from some of the Coast's most experienced officers.

"Our Government deeply appreciates the hard work of our police to keep the people of the Sunshine Coast safe. I wish them all the best for their careers ahead."

Since the Palaszczuk Government was elected, 244 new police have hit the beat across Queensland.

The Coast's new police will also be supported in their jobs by a range of measures announced in the Budget including:

- $28 million to deliver 266 extra police over the next year, bringing the total number of extra officers sworn in over the past four years to 1,100;
- Nearly 1,000 new and replacement police vehicles;
- An extra $20 million over four years for police to tackle organised crime, alcohol-fuelled violence and the drug, Ice;
- More than $6 million over three years for the roll out of body-worn video cameras.

Minister Miller announces new police for Ipswich as part of Palaszczuk Govt commitment

Police Minister and Member for Bundamba Jo-Ann Miller has announced six new police for Ipswich as part of the Palaszczuk Labor Government's commitment to an extra 266 new police statewide over the next year.

Minister Miller said Ipswich's new recruits were among 87 First Year Constables sworn into the Queensland Police Service at a special ceremony in Brisbane today.

"In last week's Budget I committed $28 million for 266 extra police across the state over the next year. For Ipswich that means a boost to local crews with six new officers soon to hit the beat across the District to help keep our community safe," Minister Miller said.

"The LNP's slash and burn approach hit Ipswich hard and that's why at the election I made a commitment to fight every day to ensure we always get our fair share. I'm our community's voice around the Cabinet table and today's announcement of new police is just one way I'm delivering on that commitment.

"I'm a fifth generation local, so I know first-hand the difference our police make to the lives of so many across the Ipswich community."

Member for Ipswich Jennifer Howard said the new officers would be posted right across the Ipswich District.

"One officer each will be posted to the Booval, Goodna, Karana Downs, Ipswich, Springfield and Yamanto stations," Ms Howard said.

"Our new recruits have spent the last few months working hard at the Academy, and now they'll spend the next year learning on the job from some of Ipswich's most experienced officers."

Member for Ipswich West Jim Madden said the Palaszczuk Government was committed to keeping the people of Ipswich safe.

"I look forward to seeing our new officers out and about across the community working hard to make sure our region continues to be a safe place to live, work and visit," Mr Madden said.

"Policing can be a very dangerous job, but our Government deeply appreciates the dedication of our police each and every day. I wish our new officers all the best for their career ahead."

Since the Palaszczuk Government was elected, 244 new police have hit the beat across Queensland.

Ipswich's new police will also be supported in their jobs by a range of measures announced in the Budget including:

- $28 million to deliver 266 extra police over the next year, bringing the total number of extra officers sworn in over the past four years to 1,100;

New police for Emerald as part of Palaszczuk Govt commitment

Police Minister Jo-Ann Miller has announced a new officer for Emerald as part of the Palaszczuk Labor Government's commitment to an extra 266 new police statewide over the next year.

Minister Miller said Emerald's new recruit was among 87 First Year Constables sworn into the Queensland Police Service at a special ceremony in Brisbane today.

"The Palaszczuk Government is committed to keeping the people of Queensland safe – that's why I'm pleased that Emerald will benefit from our promise to deliver 266 extra police over and above attrition in the next year.

"As Police Minister, I want to ensure people always feel safe and secure. I'm sure Emerald station's newest officer will be warmly welcomed by everyone in the community.

"Our Government deeply appreciates the hard work of local police to keep the people of Emerald safe. I wish them all the best for their careers ahead."

Since the Palaszczuk Government was elected, 244 new police have hit the beat across Queensland.

Emerald's new officer will also be supported in their jobs by a range of measures announced in the Budget including:

New police for the Toowoomba and Lockyer Valley as part of Palaszczuk Govt commitment

Police Minister Jo-Ann Miller has announced six new police for Toowoomba and the Lockyer Valley as part of the Palaszczuk Labor Government's commitment to an extra 266 new police statewide over the next year.

Minister Miller said the region's recruits were among 87 First Year Constables sworn into the Queensland Police Service at a special ceremony in Brisbane today.

"We're committed to ensuring the growing community of Toowoomba and the surrounding towns down the Range get their fair share of the new police allocation. I'm pleased that just a week on from the Budget, we're already delivering on that commitment," Minister Miller said.

"This region is so diverse that our new officers will be able to get a wide variety of new experiences. From traffic control at the busy Carnival of Flowers to assisting farmers and learning from the Stock and Rural Crime Squad, this really is where the city meets the country.

Minister Miller said the region's six new officers would be posted to Toowoomba and Gatton.

"Four officers will start out at the busy Toowoomba station while the other two will be based at Gatton to serve not just that community but the nearby smaller centres of Helidon, Murphys Creek and Withcott."

"Our Government deeply appreciates the hard work of our police to keep the people of Toowoomba and the Lockyer Valley safe. I wish them all the best for their careers ahead."

Since the Palaszczuk Government was elected, 244 new police have hit the beat across Queensland.

87 new police for Queensland as part of Palaszczuk Govt commitment

The Palaszczuk Labor Government is well on its way to delivering on its commitment for an extra 266 new police over the next year, with 87 First Year Constables (FYCs) sworn in to the Queensland Police Service (QPS) today.

Police Minister Jo-Ann Miller joined with Commissioner Ian Stewart to congratulate the new recruits – including three new Police Dogs (PDs) – at a special induction ceremony at the QPS Academy in Oxley.

“In last week’s Budget we set aside $28 million to boost the ranks of the QPS over the next year by 266 officers over and above attrition. I’m pleased that we’re already delivering on that commitment,” Minister Miller said.

“Our new officers have been working hard over the last 25 weeks. While the recruit training program is physically and mentally draining, it sets the stage for what will hopefully be a long and rewarding career in the QPS helping to keep Queenslanders safe.

“As Police Minister, I expect these officers to always show the highest levels of integrity, accountability and transparency when they’re out on the beat. I know from the calibre of today’s graduates that I won’t be disappointed.”

Minister Miller said the new FYCs would be posted to all corners of the state.

“Across South East Queensland, 24 officers will be staying in Brisbane with another six going to the Moreton District, six to Ipswich, five to the Sunshine Coast, four to Logan and six across the Darling Downs.

“As well, eight officers will be hitting the beat in Townsville, three in Cairns, two in Mackay, 13 across the Capricornia District and 10 in the Wide Bay.”

These allocations are based on the resources, needs and requirements of the Service.

Commissioner Stewart congratulated the FYCs on their graduation.

“I hope that today’s ceremony is a memory that each FYC carries with them throughout a long and successful career within the QPS,” Commissioner Stewart said.

“The role of a police officer is like no other – responsible for the safety and security of Queensland. There is no doubt that each of these new officers will experience some challenging situations, however there will also be many rewarding and humbling times.

“I wish luck to every officer in their career and feel confident that they will uphold the QPS standards of excellence and service.”

The QPS also welcomed three new Police Dogs (PDs) to its ranks today as part of the ceremony.

Release

PD Bertie and his handler, Sergeant Sean Baxendell; PD Larry and his handler, Sergeant Warren Gates; and PD Prue and her handler, Senior Constable Chad McLeod will all be stationed at the Brisbane Dog Squad where they will perform duties as Cadaver Detection Police Dog teams.

Since the Palaszczuk Government was elected, 244 new police have hit the beat across Queensland.

Minister Miller said Queensland's new police would be supported in their jobs by a range of measures announced in the Budget including:

- $28 million to deliver 266 extra police over the next year, bringing the total number of extra officers sworn in over the past four years to 1,100;
- Nearly 1,000 new and replacement police vehicles;
- An extra $20 million over four years for police to tackle organised crime, alcohol-fuelled violence and the drug, Ice;
- More than $6 million over three years for the roll out of body-worn video cameras;
- $6 million to continue a police helicopter service in Brisbane and the Gold Coast;
- $11.2 million for continued operation of the Gold Coast Rapid Action and Patrol group – up from $9.2 million under the LNP;
- $3.9 million for the continued operation of the Townsville Rapid Action and Patrol group.

"Our Government deeply appreciates the hard work of our police to keep the people of Queensland safe. I wish all of today's graduates the very best for their careers ahead."
